- Notes:
- (a) The contest was between Lambley and Damien Ryan (CLP). Lambley finished with 2,203 votes (50.5%) and Ryan with 2,161 votes (49.5%).
 - (b) The contest was between Uiibo and Ian Gumbula (Ind). Uiibo finished with 1,508 votes (51.6%) and Gumbula with 1,416 votes (48.4%).
 - (c) The contest was between Purick and Phil Battye (CLP). Purick finished with 2,665 votes (56.8%) and Battye with 2,030 votes (43.2%).
 - (d) These votes have been "made up" from a straight contest between Guyula with 2,252 votes (55.0%) and Labor Lynne Walker with 1,843 votes (45.0%).
 - (e) The contest was between Maley and Beverley Ratahi (Ind). Maley finished with 2,658 votes (58.3%) and Ratahi with 1,903 votes (41.7%).

The pendulum overleaf is based entirely on the two-party preferred vote in each of the 25 electoral divisions. The same is true of the statement of statistics above. Nevertheless, consider these five cases.

- (1) In Araluen, Labor needs a swing of 12.7 per cent to take the seat from a notional CLP member. However, the CLP needs only a 0.6 per cent swing to take the seat from Robyn Lambley.
- (2) In Arnhem, the CLP needs a swing of 17.7 per cent to take the seat from Labor. However, Ian Gumbula needs a swing of only 1.7 per cent to take the seat from Labor.
- (3) In Goyder, Labor needs a swing of 14.4 per cent to take the seat from a notional CLP member. However, the CLP needs a swing of 6.9 per cent to take the seat from Kezia Purick.
- (4) In Mulka the CLP needs an estimated swing of 16.1 per cent to take the seat from a notional Labor member. However, Labor needs a swing of 5.1 per cent to take the seat from Yingiya Mark Guyula.
- (5) In Nelson Labor needs a swing of 22.8 per cent to take the seat from the CLP. However, Beverley Ratahi needs a swing of "only" 8.4 per cent to take the seat from the CLP.
